IT is probable you may be much ſurpriſed, both at my name, and at the date of my epiſtle; and wonder at this beginning of an acquaintance from this lower world; which, however, I am in great hopes, you will not fail to incourage and promote. Divers Perſons have undertaken to give a deſcription of this place; but, as they had never been here themſelves, nor receiv'd any exact information from thoſe who had, their accounts have been always very falſe, or at leaſt very imperfect. The beſt are thoſe of HOMER, VIRGIL, and LUCIAN: but in all three there are great miſtakes, with which I ſhall acquaint you in the progreſs of this correſpondence. —— If the Ancients were thus miſtaken, who were frequently aſſiſted by dreams and viſions, how erroneous muſt the relations of the Moderns be, who have been almoſt intirely deſtitute of ſuch ways of revelation. 'Tis true, the Moderns have dreamed as well as the Ancients; but the dreams of the former have been generally the effect of the fumes of indigeſted liquor, not like thoſe ſober regular dreams of the latter, in the Den of Trophonius.

There have been many Letters, I know, written from the Dead to the Living, by Perſons who might juſtly be looked upon as dead, ſince they ſeemed to have no real life nor ſoul in them: but ſince they had certainly ſome ſmall remains of bodily life, and wrote concerning the Dead, with no other view but to keep themſelves alive; there is no reaſon to depend upon the accounts of ſuch hypocritical Perſons, even ſuppoſing that they could not be diſproved. But I ſhall, in the ſequel of this correſpondence, evidently convict theſe Perſons of ſuch notorious untruths, as no man who was really dead could have uttered; and no man, one would think, who was alive, and had his ſenſes, could ever have believed.

One thing in which theſe Writers generally agree, and which is certainly true, is this, That Perſons have the ſame deſires and inclinations, the ſame ſtudies and purſuits here below, which they had above.

In conſequence of which, I am to inform you of a ſecret, never before communicated to the upper Regions, That we have here eſtabliſhed in theſe lower, a regular Grubean Society. We are ſituated at the foot of the Elyſian Parnaſſus: and as we are ſo near our enemies, ſeveral of our Members are continually endeavouring to deſert us, by climbing up towards them; but are ſoon brought back again by their own ſpecific gravity.

As our Society receives a continual augmentation from your upper Regions, to prevent confuſion in ſo numerous and promiſcuous an Aſſembly, we are diſpoſed into different Claſſes, of Philoſophers, Mathematicians, Phyſicians, Orators, Poets, Grammarians, &c.

Amongſt our Philoſophers there is One of merry memory amongſt the Cantabs, who is always ſtriving to get out of our confines, and to climb up to Sir ISAAC NEWTON, in order to ſet that ſtrenuous Anti-Grubean right in his notions of Opticks. He rails very frequently againſt thoſe Blockheads his Executors, who had neither ſenſe, nor gratitude enough, to fix up his Skeleton according to his laſt Will, that it might have remained as a precious relique to be admired and reverenced by all future Grubeans.

Thoſe Gentlemen who were Members of your Society, and likewiſe of that at Crane-Court, ſpend the time in a very agreeable manner; one while reading Lectures upon Cockle-ſhells, and other great curioſities; and at another, taking the diverſion of hunting Butter-flies in the Elyſian Fields. But thoſe who once belonged to the Fraternity in Warwick-lane, are under a voluntary confinement; not caring to converſe much amongſt the other Shades, being often inſulted by Thoſe who were once their Patients in your world, and upbraided with diſpatching them into this much ſooner than they deſired.

As to Poets, we are prodigiouſly over-ſtock'd with them, inſomuch that we are forced to divide them into ſeveral Claſſes of Dramatic, Epic, Lyric, Satiric, &c. according to that Species of Poetry to which they were moſt addicted. Of theſe, that univerſal Genius Mr. D – F—E, lately arrived, raiſes our admiration here, as much as he did yours, when alive. Among other things, he frequently entertains us with accounts of the various ways of diverting the living world with News-Papers, an Amuſement altogether unknown in the age of AUGUSTUS. He aſſures us, that he himſelf at one and the ſame time, wrote two celebrated Papers, one on the Whig, and the other on the Tory ſide, with which each Party were extremely well pleaſed.

He likewiſe often makes us merry with the dexterity and management of Bookſellers, in putting off their Authors from time to time, with little or no money; and their heavy Copies, with new-vamp'd Title pages, adver tiſements, &c. But Mr. B —— the late famous Bookſeller approaches me, and it is not proper he ſhould ſee this.

From the Elyſian Fields. Farewell.

SIR,

I AM a Gentleman of an ancient family at Tillage-hall in the county of S—p: but by the fondneſs of my father and mother, who kept me from ſchool for fear of ſpoiling my eyes, I was bred to the knowledge of little beſides hounds and horns. When I grew up, I found the want of education: and ſo, to gain what improvement I could at ſuch an age, I took up my reſidence at the chief town of the County, very famous for politeneſs. I had not been long there, but by help of a modiſh taylor, and ſome other auxiliaries, together with the genteel documents of a dancing-maſter, I came to ſhake off my ruſticity, and began to make a tolerable figure. But alas! there was a rural ſort of modeſty, which ſtuck exceeding cloſe, and gave me exceſſive trouble, whenever I came in company with the Ladies. I had a natural propenſity to gallantry; but having converſed with none but my Mother's maids, I could never addreſs my ſelf to a fine Lady without apparent baſhfulneſs. I was often laugh'd at; but was forced to bear it, in hopes that time and experience might bring me to what they call a modeſt aſſurance. But all I could do ſignified nothing; and I had labour'd ſtill under the ſame infirmity, had not my good fortune introduced me to the ingenious Mrs. ARTIFICE, who was a ſort of broker in affairs of love. I was overjoy'd at ſuch an acquaintance, and through her pious inſtructions, I ſo far got the better of my modeſty, that I could romp with a lady in publick, and turn out a double entendre in a full aſſembly without confuſion of face. This refinement of behaviour in me was matter of great admiration. L – d, ſays one, is this the modeſt Mr. TILLAGE? Who could have thought it of him? ſays another. How ſtrangely he's improv'd? ſays a third. Well! ſays a fourth, I find he will make a clever Gentleman after all. I need not tell you the pleaſure I had on theſe occaſions: I grew more and more in confidence, and the favour of the Ladies: nor was it long before Mrs. ARTIFICE very graciouſly recommended me to the ſervice of a young Lady of conſiderable fortune. I dreſſed and danced, made viſits in form, drank tea, and chatted with great applauſe; and had certainly carried her, had not the envious world begun to talk too freely of my circumſtances. In ſhort I loſt my miſtreſs by the vigilance of her friends, to my great diſappointment; and ſorrow proportionable: and poor Mrs. ARTIFICE herſelf fell under the general cenſure of moſt companies there: one calling her in plain terms a little, crooked, ugly creature; another, no better than a down-right match-maker: inſomuch, that for quietneſs ſake ſhe was forced to leave the town, and take a tour to the B – h. It was an additional concern to me, to find my guardian angel treated ſo unworthily on my account. And therefore, in defence of injur'd innocence, I muſt take the liberty of informing the world, that, in ſtrictneſs of ſpeech, the prominence of a Lady's back is rather a misfortune than a fault; and that profeſſion itſelf, for which ſhe is ſo reproach'd, is far from being diſhonourable, ſince it tends to the lawful introduction of lovers into the holy ſtate of matrimony. If you pleaſe to immortalize theſe particulars in your next Journal, as being of great importance to many gentle readers of each ſex, you will highly oblige,

Tillage-Hall, SIR, Your moſt obedient Servant,
Aug. 26, 1731. THOMAS TILLAGE.

A true TALE of a Country Squire.

A Man of wiſdom may diſguiſe
His knowledge, and not ſeem too wiſe:
But, take it for a conſtant rule,
There's no concealing of a Fool.
Of this the inſtances are plenty;
But one may ſerve as well as twenty.
A worthy Knight, of great eſtate,
Prov'd to be ſo unfortunate,
That, with great coſt and fruitleſs care,
He rear'd a Blockhead to his heir.
But, hoping it wou'd mend the breed,
Shou'd he ſome prudent Damſel wed,
He ſent him out to court a Lady,
Whoſe Father he'd engag'd already.
But, firſt, he charg'd him, on his bleſſing,
To keep in mind this eaſy leſſon.
HUMPHRY, ſays he, what e'er you do,
Take heed your words be very few:
For you'll be counted wiſe, ſo long
As you have wit to hold your tongue.
Then never feed too greedily
On cuſtard, pudding, or ſweet pye;
Leſt your ungovern'd appetite
Bring ſhame and ſorrow in the night.
But JOHN ſhall go, and he'll adviſe ye,
And, let me tell you, JOHN's no niſey.
— Here, JOHN, d'you mind, give NUMPS a touch,
Whene'er he talks, or eats too much.
Be ſure take heed he don't neglect,
To pay the old Gentry great reſpect;
And all our ſervices expreſs
In handſome terms with good addreſs.
Inſtructed thus, they both took horſe,
And tow'rds the Lady bent their courſe.
Whilſt JOHN perform'd the teacher's part,
NUMPS got his compliments by heart;
Which he deliver'd in ſuch guiſe,
They thought him tolerably wiſe:
He held his tongue, this ſeem'd to be
A token of his modeſty.
All paſs'd on well, 'till ſupper came:
Oh hateful meal! oh hateful name!
Vile author of poor HUMPHRY's ſhame!
From ev'ry diſh moſt nicely dreſt,
Th' old Lady ſtill ſupply'd her gueſt.
All with aſtoniſhment beheld
His plate oft empty, often fill'd.
He eat; JOHN pull'd, and pull'd again.
Thy pulls, O JOHN, were all in vain:
For when he'd cramm'd up to the throat,
In came an apple-pye to boot.
When Madam ſaw how fond an eye
He caſt upon the ſmoaking pye,
She fill'd his plate ſix inches high.
JOHN gave his elbow many a twitch.
'Thought he, our JOHN may kiſs my b——
'Tis apple-pye, I'll eat my fill,
Let conſequence be what it will.
Fatal reſolve! I dread to tell
The conſequences which befell.
Let ſordid nightmen tell the reſt,
Who reliſh the unſavory jeſt.
My dainty Muſe wou'd fain have done:
But truth commands, ſhe muſt go on.
'Tis for repentance now too late:
The fiſh has gorg'd the ſlippery bait.
In the beſt bed the Squire muſt lie,
And JOHN in truckle bed juſt by;
Who ſlept till diſmal voice and groan
At midnight cry'd, O help! dear JOHN,
Or elſe for ever I'm undone:
For Heaven's ſake find ſome excuſe,
The deviliſh apple-pye's broke looſe;
And as I lain upon't, and roll'd it;
The bed's ſcarce big enough to hold it.
JOHN wak'd, and thus began to pray,
'The Devil take all fools, I ſay;
Why, choak ye, eat it up again,
And lick the ſheets and bolſter clean.
— What can be done? here take my ſhirt,
And I'll come wallow in the dirt.
Do you get up as ſoon as light,
I'll lye, and try to ſet all right.
So ſaid, ſo done; up got the Squire,
And JOHN lay tumbling in the mire.
He lay 'till two briſk Laſſes come
To make the bed, and clean the room.
Soon in the damaſk bed friend JOHN
Was ſpy'd half bury'd in the down.
What's here? quo' NELL, as I'm live,
The Maſter role ſoon after five.
Here is his man, a lazy loon,
Intends to lie a-bed till noon.

Quoth JOHN, I've had a tedious night,
That truckle bed has lam'd me quite.
I turn'd in here to take ſome reſt,
This is a comfortable neſt:
One nap, dear Girls, is all I beg.
———A nap! SU, give him ſome cold pig.
Come, come, ſays JOHN, don't play the fool;
I'm laxative, you'll make me pull,
And ſtraining hard will force a ſtool.
They pull'd, JOHN ſquees'd, and gave a grunt;
And out he leap'd —— Good faith I've don't:
E'en thank your ſelves. —— Away ran NELL
And SU, half poiſon'd with the ſmell.
This ſtory ſlipt not, you may ſwear,
But quickly reach'd the Maſter's ear.
His Worſhip, tickled with the whim,
Cou'd not forbear at dinner time,
To banter JOHN; nor did he fail
T'enlarge upon the curious tale.
But, ſeeing JOHN with ſhame caſt down,
He frankly tipt him half a crown.
JOHN bow'd —— Young Maſter ſitting by,
Seeing the prize with envious eye,
Into JOHN's fob directly go,
Cry'd out aloud, Why, JOHN, you know
The half crown is by right my due:
'Twas I be — t the bed, not you.
Oh blunder! never to be mended;
This one wiſe ſpeech the courtſhip ended.
Home trotted JOHN in doleful dumps;
And far behind ſneak'd hopeful NUMPS.
And Madam, thus diverted by her Squire,
Found out a cleanlier lover to lie by her.

BAVIUS.

There are upwards of 200 Maſons, Bricklayers, &c. now employed in rebuilding his Majeſty's ſtables in the Meuſe, Charing-Croſs, which are to be built after the manner of his Majeſty's ſtables at Hanover, and when finiſhed, will exceed any of that kind in Europe. P. —— Except thoſe at Hanover.

Yeſterday at a Court of Common-Council at Guildhall, the affair of the Artificers places was poſtponed: and Mr. Deputy Child moved, that the money paid by perſons to excuſe them for ſerving the Office of Sheriff, which is intended to be apply'd towards building a manſion-houſe for the L. Mayor, might be put out to intereſt for the benefit of the ſame, and not lie in the Chamber of London; when it was carry'd, that it ſhould be laid out in 3 per cent. South-Sea annuities; the 4 per cent. being to be paid off before the manſion-houſe will be built. D P. D J.

The collections of this City for the ſufferers at Blandford, Tiverton, and Ramſey, being finiſhed, amount to a very conſiderable ſum, 800 l. being paid into the Chamber of London, and about 1800 l. into the hands of Mr. Alderman Child, (including the money raiſed in his own Ward) beſides what is given by the publick companies. D P.

We hear that Mr. S. Andre, the famous French Surgeon and Anatomiſt, is gone to aſſiſt at the lying-in of the Dutcheſs Dowager of Parma. S J.

The Maſters of Colliers, to prevent the South Sea Company's interfering with them in their gainful branch of buſineſs, have thought fit to lower the price of coals, and to diſſolve the late combination that has been ſo advantageous to themſelves, and ſo detrimental to the publick all this ſummer; whereby coals will be cheaper, no doubt, in October next, than they have been any time this year. D P.

We have an account from Weymouth, that on monday laſt Mr. Templeman, Surveyor of that Port, found on board a ſmall ſloop belonging to that town, bound to Guernſey, Geo. Draper of Witham in the County of Somerſet, who murder'd Geo. Cox of Waintraw in the ſaid County, which he confeſs'd, and was thereupon committed to Dorcheſter Gaol. D P. D J. P.

Glouceſter, Sept. 11. We hear from Stroud, that on the 4th inſtant, the houſe of Joſhua Harmet, commonly call'd Geo. Ridler's Oven, was entirely deſtroy'd by fire. 'Tis the general opinion, that the ſaid houſe (which was 60 foot long, and thatch'd) was not burnt by accident; but ſet on fire by ſome malicious perſon, the flames being ſeen firſt on the outſide. C.

Tueſday laſt, being Holy-Rood day, the King's huntsmen hunted their fee-buck, in Richmond New-park, according to annual cuſtom, with blood-hounds: the field was fill'd with indifferent perſons, none of the Royal Family being there, a Butcher rode with ſuch fury againſt a Londoner, that he beat both horſe and man to the ground, and the rider was much wounded. S J. A vaſt number of country fellows and tradeſmen from London. L E. —— I take Country Fellows and Tradeſmen from London to be very different perſons, notwithſtanding my Brother ſays there are indifferent.

On wedneſday night, the 8th inſt. Mrs. Braddock went well to bed, and no ways diſorder'd in her ſenſes or behaviour, (her cuſtom was to burn a candle all night, and when her maid left her, ſhe lock'd the door, and puſh'd the key under it, ſo that ſhe always got up in the morning to let her maid into the room) ſhe aroſe out of her bed again, and 'tis ſuppos'd, employ'd ſome time in reading, becauſe one book lay open on her table; ſhe dreſs'd herſelf in a white night gown, and pinned it over her breaſt; tied a gold and ſilver girdle together, and hanged herſelf to a cloſet door in this manner: at one end of the girdle ſhe tied 3 knots, at about 1 inch aſunder, that if one ſlipt, another might hold; then opening the door, put the knotty end of the girdle over it, and locked the door again, and making a nooſe at the other end, put it about her neck, by getting on a chair, and then dropp'd off it: ſhe hung with her back againſt the door, and had hold of the key with one of her hands; ſhe bit her tongue through, and had a bruiſe on her forehead, ſo that ſhe ſeem'd to ſtruggle for life, and wanted to unlock the door to ſave herſelf. The next day the maid went ſeveral times to her door; but not hearing her ſtir, went away again, 'till between 2 and 3 in the afternoon, they got a man to go up a ladder, and open her window, when ſhe was found as before deſcribed. The Coroner's inqueſt brought in their verdict Non compos mentis; and on friday ſhe was buried in a decent manner in the Abbey Church, in the grave of her honeſt brave old father, a Gentleman who had experienced ſome undeſerved hardſhips in life, from ſome unfaithful Great Ones; but who might be ſaid to be thus far happy, that he lived not to ſee or hear ſo diſmal a cataſtrophe of his beloved daughter, who has died a ſacrifice (and we wiſh it may be a warning to others of both ſexes) to the deſperate love of gaming, which has often extinguiſhed the nobleſt lights. D J.

On friday laſt Jac. Farrington, Eſq; of the County of Wilts, was married to Miſs Woodman of the ſaid County, an agreeable young Lady, with a fortune of 12,000 l. C.

Alderman Barber and Alderman Champion are ſet out for Bath in order to mend their conſtitutions. —— Sir Edw. Becher, Kt. and Alderman, lies very ill at Tunbridge Wells. D P. At Epſom. W E.

Laſt monday, a lad about 14 years of age, very well dreſſed, was found dead in a field adjoning to Moulſey-Hurſt in Surrey, his throat being cut from ear to ear. D J. —— John Pariſh, a Watchman for Hyde-Park Corner, being yeſterday walking in Hyde-Park, a dog belonging to one of the Park-keepers, jump'd out of a hollow tree, and bit him on the leg ſo violently, that he dy'd this morning. S J. —— A hound bitch, who had young puppies. D P. 17.

FRIDAY, Sept. 17.

We hear that her Majeſty has preſented his Royal Highneſs the Duke with 10 tickets in the State Lottery. — His Royal Highneſs the Prince has rewarded all his ſervants, and others, who attended him in his late illneſs, with handſome benefactions. D P. —— The Hon. John Cornwallis, Eſq; 2d Brother to L. Cornwallis, and Member of Parliament for Eye in Suffolk, is appointed one of the Gentlemen of his Majeſty's Privy Chamber. D J.

John Shorter, Eſq; one of the Commiſſioners of the Stamp duties, and brother to the Lady of the R. Hon. Sir Rob. Walpole, who ſome time ſince was diſorder'd in his mind, and declar'd himſelf a Roman Catholick, having, through the care of his Phyſicians, been perfectly recover'd from his late diſorder, hath declar'd himſelf to be a Member of the Church of England, and received the holy Sacrament from the hands of the R. Rev. the L. Biſh. of London. P. —— Why ſhould Phyſicians be reflected on, as having no religion; ſince they make converts from Popery?

We hear that the Dutcheſs Dowager of Marlborough has augmented 3000 l. per ann. on the preſent Marchioneſs of Blandford. P.

The latter end of laſt week came on the election for a Lecturer for the Pariſh of S. Antholin's; when the Rev. Dr. Beſt, Rect. of S. Laureuce had 48 votes, and the Rev. Mr. Land 54. on which the latter was declared duly elected. C.

On monday laſt died Mr. Walker, Houſekeeper to his Majeſty at Newmarket, after a ſhort indiſpoſition. D J. And is ſucceeded by Mr. Saunders, a Gentleman belonging to his Grace the L. Chamberlain of his Majeſty's houſehold. D P.

Yeſterday about 2 in the afternoon, the crown that was fixed on the top of Whitehall-gate, in the reign of King Charles II. fell down ſuddenly. D J.

SATURDAY, Sept. 18.

On tueſday laſt the L. Delaware, Treaſurer of the Houſhold, collected 80 l. in Buſhy-park for the Huntsmen: the 3 eldeſt Princeſſes gave 10 l. a piece, and the Duke and the Princeſs Mary 5 l. each; and the reſt was given by the Nobility and Quality, who partake of that diverſion. The next day the King and Queen ſent each 50 guineas, and his Royal Highneſs the Prince 30. —— The Prince has preſented Col. Townſend, who ſate up with his Royal Highneſs ſeveral nights during his illneſs, with a repeating gold watch of great value. D P. —— Mr. Conundrum ſays, a gold watch was a very proper preſent for ſuch a conſtant Watcher.

Yeſterday morning one of his Majeſty's Meſſengers arrived in Town with an expreſs for the L. Torrington, requiring his attendance at Hampton-Court, to aſſiſt at a Council of State to be held there to morrow, on affairs of great importance; upon which a Meſſenger was immediately diſpatch'd from the Admiralty Office, to acquaint his Lordſhip, at his ſeat in Bedfordſhire. D J.

Yeſterday morning early a Meſſenger was diſpatch'd for Spain, with ſome new inſtructions for Sir Cha. Wager, concerning the tranſporting of Don Carlos into Italy. D J.

On the 10th inſtant was erected at Oxford, at the charge of the Corporation, a very handſome ducking-ſtool over the river Charwell, to cool the tails, and ſtop the mouths of ſeveral of the female ſex, obſerv'd very ſonorous of late, which, it is hop'd will have the wiſh'd for effect; and to that end a young lad, dreſs'd in woman's cloaths, hanſell'd it; and was afterwards in that habit expos'd to the view of a very numerous aſſembly, met on this moſt ſolemn occaſion. D P. —— I don't underſtand this Oxonian Logic, how it tended to the wiſh'd for effect, to hanſell this ducking-ſtool with a young lad, tho' dreſs'd in Woman's cloaths.

On thurſday a ſervant belonging to an eminent Brewer of this City, had the misfortune to have his dray go over a perſon, and to kill him on the ſpot, and yeſterday he was committed to Newgate. —— Yeſterday a Drayman belonging to Mr. Rainer, a Brewer, was committed to Newgate for driving his dray over a poor man in Roſemary-lane, and breaking his thigh-bone, about a fortnight ago, of which he died yeſterday. C. —— This is the art of making two Articles of News out of one.

A great many Affidavits have been tranſmitted to Town, relating to ſome very extraordinary proceedings at Alborow in Suffolk, in relation to the election of a Repreſentative in Parliament for that Town, in the room of Mr. Lowe, deceaſed. D P.

Laſt ſaturday died in Newgate, Mr. Theodore Willet, formerly Book-keeper to Meſs. Woodwards, Bankers: he was try'd at the Old Bailey for defrauding the ſaid Gentlemen of ſeveral 1000 l. and acquitted; but was afterwards charg'd and confin'd for the ſaid ſum as a debt. D P.

Hampton-Court, Sept. 13. By an expreſs which arriv'd this day from Mr. Colman, his Majeſty's Miniſter Plenipotentiary at the Court of Parma, dated the 15th inſtant, N. S, we have advice, that the Dutcheſs Dowager Henrietta of Parma having declar'd, that the ſymptoms which had given reaſon to believe that ſhe was pregnant, were ceas'd, and that ſhe is not with child; General Stampa, the Imperial Commiſſary and Plenipotentiary, did on the 14th take poſſeſſion of the Dutchies of Parma and Placentia, in the name of the Infante of Spain, Don Carlos; an Imperial Notary, accompany'd by the proper Officers, reading the Edict publiſh'd for that purpoſe in the balcony of the houſe of the Governor of Parma, which is ſituated in the great place of that Town, where ſome troops of Horſe and companies of Foot were drawn up, great numbers of the inhabitants being preſent at that ſolemnity. The General alſo wrote a letter the ſame day to the ſeveral tribunals of Parma and Placentia, acquain-ing them therewith, and requiring the ſeveral Magiſtrates to continue to diſcharge their reſpective Offices till farther order. C. P.

Letters from on board his Majeſty's ſquadron, commanded by Sir Charles Wager, dated the 26th of Auguſt, give an account, that they were then in Altea Bay, near Alicant, ſailing towards Barcelona; where they are to be join'd by the Spaniſh fleet, which is to take in at that port the land forces deſign'd to be introduc'd into Tuſcany. *C. This morning the Dutcheſs Dowager of Marlborough ſets out from Blenheim in Oxfordſhire, accompany'd by the Lord John Ruſſel, and the Lady Diana Spencer; but we are credibly inform'd that the nuptials are not as yet conſummated between the latter. The Lord John Ruſſel will not be of age 'till to morrow ſe'nnight, which is the reaſon of its being deferr'd, becauſe he cannot ſettle a jointure on the ſaid Lady 'till after he comes of age. Ibid.

We learn from Chicheſter, that the corpſe of Dr. Waddington, their late Biſhop, was interr'd in the Cathedral there on friday night laſt, and that it was the moſt mournful funeral that had been ſeen, almoſt the whole city being in tears, on account of his extenſive hoſpitality, charity, and beneficence; and that his loſs, with regard to the poor in particular, is irreparable. D J.

A Grant is paſſing the Seals for Charles Lee, Eſq; to be Maſter of the Revels, Jeſts, and Maſquerades, in the room of Francis-Henry Lee, Eſq; deceaſed. Ibid.

Laſt monday night a Gentleman was robbed between 10 and 11 o'clock in King ſtreet, Weſtminſter, near the end of Dartmouth-ſtreet, by two foot-pads, who took from him his money; but he being unwilling to part with his watch, and making great reſiſtance, they beat him very unmercifully, and ſeveral people coming by prevented taking his watch, ſo the rogues made off with the money and his hat. D J.

Upon reading the latter part of the Advertiſement from the Oratory, in Mr. FOG's laſt Journal, viz. N. B. The Books of the Oratory are to be had there, ſingle or in Sets; and the Returning of the Week days Orations will be advertiſed: A doubt aroſe concerning the meaning of this laſt Expreſſion. Some thought, that by the Returning of the Week-Days Orations, was to be underſtood the Repetition, upon ſuch week-days as ſhould be advertiſed, of the very ſame Orations, which had been formerly delivered on wedneſdays. But the greater part, keeping more cloſely to the literal ſenſe, thought that it ſignified the Returning of the Week-days Orations, by thoſe Booksellers who took them upon return, and could not ſell them, into the Oratory; from whence they ſhould be advertiſed anew. It is hoped, this matter will be put in a clearer light in the next Advertiſement.

Mr. QUIDNUNC read the two following ſtories: the firſt from the Courant of July 7, in a letter from ULRICK D'YPRES; and the latter from the advertiſing Hypoc. Doctor, No. 40. and deſired the Society to take notice of them, as a remarkable inſtance of the force of elegant language, in making one and the ſame thing have a quite different appearance, and yet each exceeding proper.

There was a Ball at Wapping, the room was ſoon filled with Sailors in white ſhirts and neat jackets; ſome Colliers, who wanted to dance, thought it proper to make themſelves clean in order to be admitted; but an old Sportſman among them ſoon perſuaded them from that, 'Let us 'bruſh among them as we are, ſays he, and then if they 'don't ſurrender their Places and Partners, we ſhall ſoon 'make them in ſuch a pickle, that there will be no diffe-'rence between us.

The Chimney Sweepers of St. Giles's had [a deſign] upon the Millers and Meal-men, who were dancing the Hay with muſic above ſtairs; they firſt thought of waſhing themſelves, but concluding that would be in vain, they ſwore by —— we can't be as white as they are, but we'll ruſh in amongſt them, and make them as black our ſelves.

Mr. MÆVIUS obſerved, that it was an odd thought of the Chimney-ſweepers, to think of waſhing themſelves as white as the Millers and Mealmen. But Mr. GINGLE expreſſed his ſentiments in the eight following verſes.

Came one of theſe from Whig, and one from Tory,
I ſhould not wonder at the various ſtory.
Both are alike, but different in their hue:
Both may be falſe; and perhaps neither's true.
For well I am aſſur'd, that ULRICK D'YP
Can ſtories tell, as well as DOCTOR HYP.
Whom to believe I'm puzzled much: for why?
'Tis plain, One ſwears; and likely, Both may lye.

To whom Mr. DACTYL made this extempore Reply.

Both may be true, for all your comic Rhymes:
Different the places, perſons: why not times?
You only dreamt you took our Authors napping.
One Dance was at St. Giles's, one at Wapping.
Here in white ſhirts and jackets Sailors play:
There Millers mix'd with Mealmen dance the hay.
Alike can't Colliers joke and Chimney-ſweepers,
As well as RATCLIFFE and Sir ULRICK D'YPRES?

Paris, Sept. 14. N. S. A Prieſt ſome days ago took a wafer out of the Pyx, and holding it up, called out aloud, That if any of them had been at Abbot Paris's grave, they muſt not preſume to receive the Sacrament. Upon which a young woman wept bitterly, and acknowledg'd, that ſhe had been at the Abbot's grave. The Prieſt order'd her to draw near; and, in the preſence of all the congregation, made her repeat a promiſe, that ſhe would never go to the Abbot's grave again, becauſe he died out of the pale of the Church; and then he gave her the Communion. —— The Abbot Chauvelin is order'd to depart the Kingdom, for giving an atteſtation of a miracle wrought at that Abbot's grave. —— M. Linguet, Profeſſor in the College of Navarre, is baniſhed, not to come within 20 miles of Paris, for atteſting the miraculous cure of an eye of the ſon of a Spaniſh Superintendant, who, with 12 others, boarded at the ſaid M. TUESDAY, Sept. 21.

Paris, Sept. 21. A letter from the King having been read in Parliament; after great debates it was reſolv'd to come to a final determination of the temporal and ſpiritual juriſdiction: and a Committee was appointed accordingly, who immediately drew up the following Piece, which was approv'd, viz. —— The Court being deſirous to prevent the abuſes, which would undoubtedly ariſe from the Propoſitions contained in a great number of writings, tending to undermine the ſtrongeſt foundations of the Royal Authority; and being inclin'd to confirm his Majeſty's ſubjects more and more in true principles, with regard to the authority of our Kings; hath agreed upon the following Articles, as containing the principles eſtabliſh'd by the ordinances of the Kingdom, viz. I. That the temporal Power, immediately appointed by God, is entirely independent of all other power; and that no other power whatever can, in the leaſt, break in upon the ſame, directly or indirectly, upon any account. II. That it doth not belong to the Miniſters of the Church, under pretence of doctrine, or for any other cauſe whatever, to fix the limits which God hath appointed between the two Powers; and that the laws and regulations which the Church hath a power to make, are no laws of the State, any farther than they are veſted with the awful authority of the Sovereign. III. That the juriſdiction ſolely belongs to the temporal Power, which hath the right to make uſe of the viſible and external power to coerce the King's ſubjects. IV. That the Miniſters of the Church are accountable to the King, and in caſe of abuſe, to the Court of Parliament under his authority, for the exerciſe of the juriſdiction which they have from God himſelf, and for every thing, which, in the exerciſe of the power that they have directly from God, may tend to diſturb the public tranquillity, and to ſubvert the laws and maxims of the Kingdom.—It was reſolved to turn the above Articles into an Arret, in order to publiſh and affix the ſame; but the Court forbid the Parliament to execute that deſign. P.

Shewing how he came to London to ſeek his Fortune, having been adviſ'd to it by a Cunning Woman; his Money being ſpent, he ſat down to condole himſelf at a Merchant's Door, who took him into his Family to be a Scullion. The Merchant ſending a Ship to the Kingdom of Morocco, call'd his Servants, according to Cuſtom, to ſend their Ventures; among which Whittington appear'd, and having nothing but a Cat, he ſent her. The Ship arriving at Morocco, which Kingdom being much infeſted with Rats and Mice, the Emperor return'd for the Cat, a great Quantity of Gold Duſt and ſeveral precious Jewels. While the Ship was on her Voyage, poor Whittington was ſo cruelly treated by Madge, a Cook-maid, that he reſolved to return into the Country; being got two Miles from London, and hearing the Bells ring fancy'd they ſpoke to him to return, and that he ſhould be Lord-Mayor of London, which induc'd him to go again to the Merchant's, where he had not long been before the Arrival of his Treaſure, half of which he beſtow'd for the City's Uſe; whereon he was unanimouſly elected Lord-Mayor, in all the Pomp and Pageantry us'd in thoſe Days.
